

On a heuristic viewpoint concerning the production and transformation of light

Albert Einstein

March 17, 1905

A profound formal difference exists between the theoretical concepts that physicists have formed about gases and other ponderable bodies, and Maxwell's theory of electromagnetic processes in so-called empty space...